Cookies are now fundamental tools as they allow modern sites to work at their best, allowing for maximum personalization, interaction and fluidity in browsing. But they can also be used to track user browsing and then send advertisements in line with those preferences.

- technical cookies (necessary, even indispensable, for a full - or better - use of the site) or profiling cookies (aimed at creating a user profile, in order to send advertising messages in line with the preferences shown by the user during earlier browsing).
- Social: third-party cookies may be used on the Websites to allow users to interact with social networks (Facebook, Twitter, LinkedIn...) and in particular to share site content through the aforementioned social networks.

The Italian Supervisory Authority considers cookies to be technical if they are session cookies, functionality cookies or - subject to certain conditions - analytics cookies particularly the Italian Supervisory Authority, in its decision of 8 May 2014, has specified that the latter may be treated as technical cookies only if they are used for optimization of the site by the owner of the site, who may collect aggregate information on the number of users and how they visit the site.
